Current Affairs

August rains hold the key to India's major summer crops.

India suffered a severe drought in 2009 when monsoon rains failed due to El Nino. Poor monsoons could dent cr ndia - the world's No.2 rice and sugar producer. This year India expected to see below-average to average rains if El Nino weather pattern gains strength. But India's weather office rates as normal rainfall between 96 and 104 percent of a 50-year average of 89 centimetres. Healthy harvests can help keep a lid on food inflation.
